

Tassie Pippert is a professor in the School of Hospitality, Sport and Recreation Management at James Madison University. Tassie's diverse background in culinary arts, hospitality management and human resources development always takes a backseat to her first love – the performing arts. Having spent time “on the road” as a professional big band singer, Tassie spent her first retirement stint as a background vocalist in the recording studio. Her vocal talents are now confined to Muhlenberg Lutheran Church where she serves as a member of the Celebration Singers and occasionally plays guitar. Tassie also hosts a long-running cooking show on WVPT Public Television. She is past president of the Shenandoah Chapter of the Association of Fundraising Professionals and serves on the board of the Virginia Fundraising Institute. Tassie holds a bachelor's degree in business leadership and management, and a master's degree in human resources management. Married to Tom, Tassie has two grown sons who now reside in Oregon and North Carolina.
